MAKE..... 15 mins

'Locked-in syndrome' is a rare condition where a patient is mentally aware, but due to the paralysis of most of their voluntary muscles, they are unable to communicate verbally and rely on eye movements and in some cases one eye. In pairs, use a chart with the alphabet/punctuation and create a method to communicate a message across to your partner. What is the most challenging about it? (accidental blinks?) What advancements can technology make to improve the lives of people with this condition to ensure that they are also able to communicate efficiently?

EXPLORE..... 15 mins

SMS (Short Message Service) was originally created for deaf people to be able to communicate via mobile phone. Today, everyone benefits from text messages. In groups, create an infographic explaining the importance of diversity in technology. Why is it advantageous to work in a diverse workforce with people from all backgrounds, genders, colours, religion and different abilities. In your infographic, explain how you think technology would be different if we designed technology for disabled people, ethnic minorities and women.
